"COMING FULL CIRCLE": AMERICAN MIDWEST BALLET WRAPS SEASON 12
WITH THE BALLET THAT STARTED IT ALL

It was just after 10 pm on Saturday, October 2, 2010. Erika Overturff, breathless from two hours onstage, was still in costume as she ran outside to pose for commemorative photos under the Orpheum Theater marquee. The new ballet company she had founded had just completed its first mainstage production: Harrison McEldowney's Swing, Swing, Swing!

Fast-forward to April 2022. Now wrapping up its twelfth season, the company – still with Overturff as its artistic director and a performer – is now American Midwest Ballet. Its original 12-member roster has grown to 23 professional dancers from across the US and two foreign countries, and it is now based in state-of-the-art studios in Council Bluffs' Hoff Family Arts & Culture Center.

"It's time to celebrate," Overturff said, "and a great time to bring back Swing, Swing, Swing!"

BALLET

The ballet is a tribute to the Second World War's "Greatest Generation," with a central love story framed by dance vignettes that draw on the era's popular styles, Overturff said.

"It's terrifically entertaining because it's so varied," she said. "Harrison McEldowney has an amazing creative range – he choreographs for everything from classical ballet companies to cruise ships, and the Olympics to Carnegie Hall. In Swing, Swing, Swing! he incorporates jiving G.I.s, tap dancers, Lindy hoppers, and Rosie the Riveters en pointe. There's a beautiful movie-musical-style romantic duet that rolls right into a full-on bar fight. The dancers love performing this ballet because they get to use so much of their movement vocabulary."

Another memorable feature of the ballet, Overturff said, is the jazz combo that performs Big Band music live onstage with the dancers. For 2022, she said, bandleader Doyle Tipler has brought back all six members of the DoyleMusic Combo who performed in the original production.

"I was thrilled when I heard that Doyle was getting the band back together," Overturff said. "The energy that they bring to the stage is incredible, and the dancers amplify that energy. Suddenly you feel like you're really in a '40s nightclub, having a great time dancing to a fabulous band."

As American Midwest Ballet completes its twelfth season, Overturff said, it is doubly satisfying to return to the ballet that started it all — performing in both the company's newest venue, the Hoff Family Arts & Culture Center, and at the Orpheum, where it all began.

"We've been working hard for twelve years," she said. "It's special coming back to Swing, Swing, Swing! because we can stop and see just how far we've come.

"And we can also recapture the excitement of that first season — of putting on a show and having an audience and being a company. It's a way of coming full circle."

Performances of Swing, Swing, Swing! will be at 7:30 pm Saturday, April 2, at the Hoff Family Arts & Culture Center, 1001 South 6th Street, Council Bluffs; and 7:30 pm Saturday, April 9, at Omaha's Orpheum Theater.

SYNOPSIS: SWING, SWING, SWING!

Choreography: Harrison McEldowney

American Midwest Ballet [Ballet Nebraska] Premiere: Orpheum Theater, October 2, 2010

It's World War II, and a patriotic fervor unites the nation as Americans support both each other and their collective cause. Our scene is set with soldiers embarking on their daily routine — energized by spirit and determination.

At the same time, a bevy of hostesses prepares for the task ahead of them: providing entertainment to the servicemen on leave at New York's Stage Door Canteen. The soldiers seek a happy refuge from the rigors of war at this famous establishment. Big Band music, swing dancing and a host of performers offer much-needed recreation to these American heroes. One lucky man even finds love at the canteen and a girl to call his own.

The soldiers are shipped off to defend the nation. With the men away at war, the women assume the duties left behind – joining the workforce and coining the phrase "Rosie the Riveter." Overseas, the soldiers reflect on the nature of GI life and dream of Vargas calendar girls. Back in New York, a hostess from the Stage Door Canteen longs for the return of her new love, while he simply dreams of home.

A nation rejoices as the war ends and the soldiers return home. The young lovers reunite and dream of being a "Me & Mrs. You." In celebration, the Stage Door Canteen once again comes alive to the sounds of Swing, Swing, Swing!
